This unique Integrative Expressive Arts Therapy (iEXAT) Professional Certificate Training is a practical training program that provides social workers, helping professionals and other interested parties with hands-on experience of the healing power of expressive arts therapy. It integrates the person-centered philosophy, Jungian approach and phenomenological perspective as the main theoretical frameworks for expressive arts therapy practice.

There are 4 phases in this training program. Through experiential learning, lectures, live demonstrations, incorporated with small group (trio) reflective learning, in-training clinical practicum and supervision, participants can put their learnings into practice. The practice-based learning process is supported by supervisors who hold the REAT credential.
